Catie Miller case.

Murdered woman's father reacts after her remains are identified

For John Miller, it was just a matter of when.

On Wednesday, Halifax Regional Police confirmed what the father of Catie Miller has known in his heart for months: that the remains found during their investigation into her murder were in fact those of the 29-year-old single mother.

"It's just another baby step forward for us," Miller said quietly by phone.

He was called by the province's medical examiner Tuesday to learn the remains are officially hers.

Investigators working at one of the four crime scenes connected to Miller's murder found human remains Nov. 26. They were then sent to the Nova Scotia Medical Examiner Service for identification.

"It's been seven months," Miller said of how he's coping with Catie's murder.

"But it's still hard to believe she's gone. It's so final. There (are) no goodbyes. Just gone."

Young students clambered down a ladder and out a window Wednesday after their school bus went off the road and landed in a ditch, slightly injuring one child, police said.

RCMP Cpl. Greg Church said the bus carrying 15 elementary school students was on Cherylann Drive in Eastern Passage when the accident happened at about 7:30 a.m.

"The bus came to rest in a ditch on its righthand side, blocking the main door," he said. "The fire department assisted the children off the bus through the lefthand emergency window using a ladder."

Emergency personnel, including police, firefighters and ambulances, responded to the crash within 10 minutes, he said.

Church didn't have any details on the child who was hurt, but he said the injuries were not serious.

again to state his case

STEPHANIE TAYLOR

The fate of one of the 13 suspended male Dalhousie dentistry students still hangs in the balance; his lawyer says no decision was reached following a disciplinary hearing Wednesday.

Ryan Millet — who is currently suspended from all clinical privileges due to his involvement in a controversial Facebook group — exited the Dalhousie dentistry building accompanied by his wife and two lawyers shortly after 4 p.m., at the end of a four-hour-plus hearing before the academic standards class committee.

"So we're still waiting for some legal submissions from both sides before a specific decision is made by the committee," Millet told reporters on Wednesday.

"I did feel like there was a chance for me to share some of my perspective on the whole story and that was good."

Millet's lawyer, Bruce MacIntosh, said he has advised his client to keep quiet until the committee reaches a verdict, and that he's willing to comment afterwards.

tee's timeline, only saying he expects legal briefs to be filed by early next week.

Wednesday was the second time Millet appeared before the disciplinary committee. An initial meeting that took place last week was adjourned after nearly 4-1/2 hours.

In a news conference the next day, MacIntosh called the university's disciplinary process "irrevocably broken," stating that the academic standards committee handling the case should start fresh and hire an outside adjudicator.

Lawyers also explained that since Millet exposed the Facebook group and actively participated only by "liking" one of six inappropriate posts, he should have his clinical privileges reinstated.

The university initially revoked Millet and 12 other fourth-year male dentistry students of their clinical activities in December after it was discovered they belonged to a Facebook group where misogynistic and hateful comments were allegedly posted about their female classmates.

Stores 'undermined' tobacco system: Service Nova Scotia

Contraband. RCMP, retailers at odds over term's definition

Police have laid more than 100 charges against several convenience-store owners connected with contraband tobacco around Halifax, but some owners are taking issue with the term "contraband" and say they face fewer charges than is being reported.

On Wednesday, RCMP Insp. Glenn Lambe of the federal and serious organized crime unit and Bernie Meagher, director of audit and enforcement for Service Nova Scotia, told reporters that the owners of Bridgeview Grocery on the Bedford Highway have been ordering large quantities of tobacco products from wholesalers, then illegally selling those cartons to retailers across HPM

"It's not the typical contraband tobacco that's not stamped ... or bagged properly," Lambe said.

Last Thursday, RCMP said five stores were searched and officers seized 74 cartons of cigarettes and 93 other wrappers suggesting cigarettes were removed from their packaging prior to resale.

Meagher alleged that by illegally selling from one retailer to another instead of the proper wholesalers, Bridgeview and the retailers who purchased from them "undermined our whole licensing regime."

Lambe said the investigation began last September and wrapped up recently, while the 12 people charged are due in court in March.

When a retailer sells cartons of tobacco to another store, which would in turn sell those cartons to customers, Lambe said there's "no record" of the second sale so any tax money from the customer doesn't go back to the government.

Meagher said Bridgeview could order large numbers of cigarettes and get bigger discounts from wholesalers, then share those profits with other stores.

An audit of financial records is ongoing and will be turned over to the Canada Revenue Agency, but Meagher said there is a "substantial" sum involved.

George Israel of Israel Grocery told Metro he had not purchased any cigarettes from Bridgeview Grocery, but he once borrowed five cartons from the owner when his tobacco shipment didn't arrive on time.

"Unbelievable; I was shocked," Israel said about seeing his name next to contraband charges.

Israel emphasized the

the retail vendor from a wholesale vendor," which is very different than using the term contraband, and he is angry the RCMP listed two other charges against him.

"We were all shocked," the man said, adding stores all over HRM buy cartons from neighbouring retailers now and then.

man seeks compensation

An appeal court was described as Gerald Barton's last chance at justice Wednesday by a lawyer who argued RCMP negligence contributed to his client's wrongful conviction on a statutory rape charge 45 years ago.

"This is probably Gerry Barton's final stop on his quest for justice and I hope you will entertain arguments on his behalf," Dale Dunlop told the five-judge panel of the Nova Scotia Court of Appeal.

Dunlop argued that a Nova Scotia Supreme Court judge erred last April when he cleared the RCMP of wrongdoing and ruled there was nothing wrong with the way police investigated the case against Barton, who is now 64.

Justice James Chipman should have found Barton's confession in 1969 was false and caused by some form of police coercion when the then-19-year-old gave a statement in Digby, he said.

Since the woman recanted her story in 2008 and blamed her brother for causing her pregnancy, Dunlop said the confession must be both false and improperly obtained.

"Why did Gerry Barton say he had sex with someone when he didn't?... There was no sex," he said. "The onus is on the other side to explain how they got this through correct police methods."

He urged the judges to award Barton significant damages in his lawsuit against the Mounties.

A lawyer representing the RCMP defended Chipman's conclusion that Earl Hamilton, an RCMP corporal at the time, interviewed the right people and properly obtained an incriminating statement from Barton.

Angela Green said there is no factual evidence to show that police somehow coerced Barton into his admission of sex with the girl.

"There's obviously no evidence of threats or promises.... There's no evidence, nothing, about police trickery," she said.

Dunlop also argued the Charter of Rights and Freedoms may have been violated when the province refused to negotiate compensation with Barton over the past four years. The Canadian Press

Brad Johns savs former dump could serve as new firing range for Halifax police

DAVENPORT

The regional councillor for Middle and Upper Sackville is suggesting putting the old Sackville landfill to use as a new firing range for Halifax police.

Coun. Brad Johns made the suggestion Wednesday morning during an overview of the Halifax Regional Police draft budget and business plan for 2015-16.

Jean-Michel Blais, the chief of HRP, told the committee of the whole that the force is looking for another firing range, because the current range on Old Guysborough Road isn't meeting its needs.

"One, it's a fair ways away, and two, it's not always available because other people are using it," he said.

Johns said he'd raised the possible use of the Sackville landfill several years ago and received positive responses from police officers and a city

"I don't think the community would be opposed to it, I think there's ample property ... so there might be an opportunity to utilize that area as well," said Johns.

Blais welcomed the suggestion and said it was worth exploring.

Halifax councillors have taken the unusual step of awarding two garbage collection contracts to the secondhighest-scoring bidders, rather than the top contender.

City staff had recommended awarding the solid waste collection contracts in five of eight areas - totalling nearly $40 million — to RE Group, based on the scoring of its bids during the procurement process.

But that prompted concerns about the scoring process, competition in the marketplace and the wisdom of awarding tenders to a company that had previously held none of the contracts in

"I thought that in looking at tenders that we not only looked at the lowest price, but we could look at the quality of service also," said Coun. Gloria McCluskey.

Councillors were specifically unhappy the familyowned business that had previously held the contract in the Preston-Lawrencetown-Chezzetcook area, Leo J. Beazley, lost out on the $6.6-million contract by half a point because its bid was $13,000 higher than that of RE Group.

"Business is business, I understand that," said Coun. Bill Karsten. "But we're taking away the livelihood of someone ... over $13,000?"

After an in-camera discussion, council invoked a clause in the RFP that limited the number of collection areas awarded to any single bidder to three, and awarded the contracts in Areas 3 and 7 to the second-highest bidders, GFL Environmental and Leo J. Beazley.

Replica. Province's auditor general says the project lacked planning and oversight

Nova Scotia's centuries-old reputation as a proud, seafaring culture was dealt a blow Wednesday when the province's auditor general blamed a government department for badly mismanaging the Bluenose II project.

Auditor general Michael Pickup released a scathing report, saying the project, which is nearly four years behind schedule, could cost the province three times the original budget because its Heritage Department failed to follow basic management practices.

He said the rebuilding of the replica of the famed racing schooner was undermined by a lack of planning and poor oversight.

His audit says the department didn't define the responsibilities for contractors, failed to prepare a proper budget and drafted a weak contract.

When the project was announced in 2009 by the province and Ottawa, the budget was set at $14.4 million, half of which was to come from a federal infrastructure fund.

However, Pickup said costs so far have hit $20 million, with $5 million more in dispute. Ottawa's pitched in only $4 million because the project failed federal deadlines.

Nova Scotia Supreme Court rules in favour of B.C. Christian law school

The Nova Scotia Supreme Court has ruled that the province's law society doesn't have the authority to deny accrediting graduates from a Christian university because of the school's opposition to sex outside heterosexual marriage. The court says the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society doesn't have the power to require law schools, such as the one proposed at Trinity Western University in British Columbia, to change its policies.

The society decided last April to impose a ban on articling students from the university in Langley until it drops a requirement to have students sign a community covenant. That agreement requires students to promise they won't have sex outside heterosexual marriage.

The society argued last month that the agreement represents unlawful discrimination against gays charter and violates the province's Human Rights Act.

"You just have to get in the door and then the magic happens on its own. You actually don't need to know a lot about art."

In Campbell's section, long rows of tiny light blue lights hang down vertically from the ceiling, forming a rectangular cube.

Up close, the lights appear to be flickering at random. But when standing at a distance, silhouettes of people can be seen walking across the twinkling lights.

Wasser said Campbell, an engineer and filmmaker, took video of people walking and then depixelated it.

"Using very sophisticated software that he's written and created and patented, he de-pixelates film," Wasser said of the San Franciscobased artist.

"He actually forces you to participate when you're looking at his pieces. With the depixelization, subconsciously you're actually forced to go into your memory to make some sort of association that will then create the reality of the piece."

They appear to make measured movements, but as someone in the crowd moves closer, the feathers start behaving erratically, pulsing back and forth and then closing as if to hug the viewer.

"It just has this beautiful movement with a complete sense a humour," explained Wasser.

CSE stands by its role in Internet hunt for terrorists

Spy agency. A document says that CSE analysts can access information from 10 to 15 million downloads from free sites each day

Canada's electronic spy agency is defending its role in the search for extremists following a report that says it sifts through millions of videos and documents downloaded globally every day through filesharing services.

Details of the Communications Security Establishment project, called Levitation, are revealed in a 2012 Power-Point presentation obtained by former U.S. intelligence contractor Edward Snowden, CBC analyzed the document with U.S. news website The Intercept, which obtained it from Snowden. It also posted the presentation online, with some of the information blacked out. The Ottawa-based CSE employs mathematicians, codebreakers, linguists and software experts, with the aim of both collecting foreign secrets and shielding Canada's confidences from prying eyes.

The document says that under Levitation, CSE analysts can access information on about 10 to 15 million uploads and downloads of files from free websites each day.

Extremists generally use free file-uploading sites to distribute training materials, while al-Qaida uses them to spread jihadist propaganda, the document says. It notes CSE finds about events" per month, citing one on how to make a gas bomb.

One privacy advocate expressed alarm at the CBC report.

"CSE is clearly spying on the private online activities of millions of innocent people, including Canadians, despite repeated government assurances to the contrary," said OpenMedia.ca spokesman David Christopher.

"Law-abiding Internet users who use popular file-hosting services are now finding themselves under the government's microscope."

CSE stood by its methods, saying they have helped counter terrorism.

"CSE's foreign signals intelligence has played a vital role in uncovering foreign-based extremists' efforts to attract, radicalize, and train individuals to carry out attacks in Canada

CSE said that the agency is authorized to collect and analyze metadata — data trails about messages and calls, not the actual content.

- Privacy advocates have stressed that metadata is not innocuous, as it can reveal much about a person's online behaviour.
- CSE said it takes strict measures to protect the privacy of Canadians when it comes across their information.

Jordan offers prisoner swap to ISIL in bid to save pilot

Hostages. ISIL threatens to kill both if would-be hotel bomber not freed

Jordan offered a precedentsetting prisoner swap to ISIL on Wednesday in a desperate attempt to save a Jordanian air-force pilot the militants purportedly threatened to kill along with a Japanese hostage.

Meeting the Islamic State's demand for the release of a would-be hotel bomber linked to al-Qaida would run counter to the kingdom's hard-line approach to the extremists, but the government faces growing domestic pressure to bring the pilot home.

Efforts to release the pilot, Lt. Muath al-Kaseasbeh, and Japanese journalist Kenji Goto gained urgency with the release late Tuesday of a purported online ultimatum claiming ISIL would kill both hostages within 24 hours if the al-Qaida-linked prisoner was not freed.

By Wednesday evening, there was no word on the fate of the hostages and no sign that a swap was underway. In a possible indication of a holdup, Jordan's foreign minister wrote on his Twitter account that Jordan had not received evidence the pilot was alive and healthy.

The scope of a possible swap and of ISIL's demands also remained unclear. Jordanian government spokesman Mohammed al-Momani said Jordan is ready to trade the prisoner, an Iraqi woman convicted of involvement in deadly Amman hotel bombings in 2005, for the pilot. Al-Momani made no mention of Goto, and it was not clear if the swap proposed by Jordan would satisfy the hostage-takers.

Any exchange would set a precedent for negotiating with ISIL, who in the past have not publicly demanded prisoner releases. Jordan's main ally, the United States, opposes negotiations with extremists.

Hezbollah hits Israeli convoy, kills two soldiers

Missiles fired by the Lebanese Hezbollah group struck an Israeli military convoy on Wednesday, killing two soldiers in an apparent retaliation for a deadly airstrike attributed to Israel that killed six Hezbollah fighters in Syria earlier this month.

It was the deadliest Hezbollah attack against Israeli forces since a 2006 war between the two sides.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Israel would respond "forcefully" to the attack. The military launched aerial and ground assaults on Hezbollah positions, including at least 50 artillery shells, according to Lebanese officials.

A Spanish peacekeeper was killed in the border flareup in southern Lebanon.

In a statement, Hezbollah said its fighters destroyed a number of Israeli vehicles that were carrying Israeli officers and soldiers and caused casualties among "enemy ranks." The soldiers' ranks were not immediately known.

Hezbollah said the attack was carried out by a group calling itself the "righteous martyrs of Quneitra," suggesting it was in retaliation for an Israeli airstrike on the Golan Heights on Jan. 18 that killed six Hezbollah fighters and an Iranian general.

Ever since, Israel has braced for a response to the strike, beefing up its air defences and increasing surveillance along its northern frontier.

The Israeli military said several anti-tank missiles hit an Israeli military convoy near Mount Dov and Chebaa Farms, a disputed tract of land where the borders of Israel, Lebanon and Syria meet. The two soldiers were killed in the strike and seven others were wounded, the military said said.

About an hour after the attack, mortars were fired at several Israeli military locations on Mount Dov and Mount Hermon, the Israeli military said. No injuries were reported in that attack. The military said it responded with fire toward Lebanese positions and evacuated Israeli visitors from a ski resort in the area. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A teenage passenger who was in a car when a 17-year-old girl was shot and killed by Denver police has disputed authorities' account of her death, saying officers opened fire before one of them was struck by the vehicle. The shooting occurred amid a national debate about police use of force fuelled by racially charged episodes in Ferguson, Mo., and New York City. The passenger, speaking to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity, said her friend, Jessica Hernandez, lost control of the vehicle because she was unconscious after being shot.

A Toronto developer has released a new app that keeps your online browsing safe from Big Brother.

Andrew Hilts is the man behind TrackerSSL, a plugin for the Chrome web browser that lets users know if websites are transmitting their personal information without encrypting it first.

TrackerSSL works by targetting data shared by online advertising services such as Google and Facebook. "By compiling a list of what you're browsing online, ad companies can infer what your interests are, or what political views you have," Hilts said.

The problem is that many websites send information to advertising sites in a way that's easy for spy agencies to

Tim Hortons bound by layoff restrictions

Takeover. Industry Canada says Burger King has agreed to keep 80 per cent of corporate jobs

Ottawa has restricted Burger King from eliminating more than 20 per cent of corporate staff at Tim Hortons' long-time headquarters or regional offices, an Industry Canada spokesman confirms.

The newly-merged company Restaurant Brands International is required to "maintain significant employment levels" of non-restaurant employees, as part of the list of commitments the fast food behemoth made to get final approval in December from the federal government to seal the $12.5 billion deal.

Although it wasn't announced at the time, Industry Minister James Moore actually secured a more definitive commitment that Burger King maintain 80 per cent of Tim Hortons' "entire corporate footprint" at both the Oakville head office and regional offices across Canada, said his press secretary, Jake Enwright.

Tim Hortons still refused Wednesday to publicly divulge the exact number of people who were laid off this week, although media speculation has run rampant that up to 40 per cent of middle managers were swept up

CRIMINALIZING DISSENT

Terrorism "endorsement" law a half-baked idea that would make free thought illegal

Last Sunday, Prime Minister Stephen Harper, standing before a humongous Canadian flag, promised a new anti-terror bill that would "help authorities stop planned attacks, get threats off our streets and"—insert record scratch—"criminalize the promotion of terrorism"

Such a law is intended to prevent another Parliament shooting, but without a Criminal Code definition of "terrorism" (just a robust definition of "terrorist activity"), does it also leave us vulnerable to an attack on free expression?

We can assume Harper was referring to jihadi terrorism — not environmental terrorism or white supremacist terrorism — since that was the crux of his campaigntinged speech at an Ottawa secondary school. But we'll see tomorrow, as he is poised to unveil the proposed legislation Friday. The Liberals are backing it.

"Glorification of terrorism" laws have been on Harper's radar for a while, and they've intensified after incidents in October that claimed the lives of two Canadian soldiers—one in Quebec and another in Ottawa on Parliament Hill. French authorities recently used a glorification law to arrest comedian Dieudonné M'bala M'bala, who posted "I feel like Charlie Coulibaly" (Coulibaly being the last name of one of the Paris gunmen) on Facebook.

Two researchers, from the universities of British Columbia and Waterloo, recently assessed a prospective glorification law for Canada and concluded: "The chill effect on speech would be potentially enormous ... The measures may also be counterproductive, diminishing the very speech that may contain strategic and tactical intelligence for counter-terrorism investigators."

To be clear, our Charter of Rights and Freedoms already prohibits expressions of violence, threats of violence and general hate propaganda. With sweeping powers such as preventative detention already in its possession, it's difficult to understand why law enforcement needs anything more.

Criminalizing "endorsements of terror" could target speech with only vague intent.

And the law doesn't like vagueness. It recoils at vagueness. It shrivels and breaks apart.

An endorsement, we can assume, is a public or private approval of terrorism — systematic violence to coerce a government or community (I'm just deferring to the Oxford dictionary now, since I can't rely on the criminal code for a definition yet). A Canadian might endorse or glorify terrorism because he or she is trying to test the waters with their audience and organize an attack, sure, but a Canadian might also do so for more complex reasons that we won't begin to understand if we pre-emptively shush them.

Some Canadians' families are from countries where their elected governments are also threats to national security, or belong to a marginalized ethnic group that, overseas, is protected by a certified terrorist organization.

Prepare to read many "endorsements" of terrorism as Israel prepares to retaliate against Lebanon for the killing of two IDF soldiers by Hezbollah missiles.

Are they, and anyone who retweets an ISIL beheading video, or likes M'bala's comments, guilty by association?

And what else are we willing to criminalize in the name of small security?

Regardless of how shocking and, yes, potentially dangerous, these "endorsements" may be, they have the right to be expressed then criticized, debated or mocked.

Apparently, though, this isn't enough for the Harper government

Is it enough for you?

No good deed goes unpunished by law enforcement

I'm your average Canadian — polite, apologetic and law-abiding. I like that rules are in place to maintain order and fairness.

But there's something wrong with a legal system that punishes Good Samaritans — and by extension the people they are trying to help.

Take the recent story of a Calgary woman who was fined $250 for giving her transit pass to a man who was down on his luck. The woman, who had two passes, says she was trying to be generous by gifting her pass to someone in need. A transit officer fined them both.

"It's not about the money or the fine, but about the way David was treated," the woman told Metro in a recent interview. "Calgary is supposed to be a place where we look out for each other."

She's right. Rules, 99 per cent of the time, should be enforced. But if we can't make exceptions for those cases when mistakes are made or, when a broken rule helps give someone a boost, then we've become automatons with no capacity for discretion and compassion.

The enforcement of draconian rules — simply because they are rules — happens a lot.

A Toronto restaurant that caters to disabled diners is facing tens of thousands of dollars in fines from the city because a newly built ramp violates a bylaw by several centimetres. Rules are rules, says the city, and the expensive ramp must be dismonthed

Then there are the municipalities, at least 30 in the U.S., that are cracking down on food distribution programs for the homeless. In a shocking example of NIMBYism, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., "feeding sites" must now be more than 500 feet away from residential properties and must not operate outdoors. In that city, a 90-yearold man—who, along with two ministers has been feeding the homeless in public for 23 years now—faces jail time and a fine for the crime of handing out food to the hungry.

I've run into similar situations on a much smaller scale. On a recent flight, a fellow passenger with splints on her arms asked me to lift her carry-on into the overhead storage. A flight attendant put a quick stop to this, informing us that no one except the passenger was permitted to lift luggage on the plane. Neither of us was fined, obviously, but it was another case of hard-and-fast rulefollowing that seemed ridiculous given the situation.

We, the rule followers and rule enforcers, need to ask ourselves two questions: First, who are these laws protecting? Anyone? No one? And who are these laws hurting? The needy? The giving?

Rules are there to protect us, to make the world better and safer. But zero-tolerance policies are missing the point, and when our laws hurt rather then help, they are not really doing their job.

Genre-bending author makes everyone look lazy

Fiction. Novelist, director, producer and screenplay writer Seth Grahame-Smith is also part of the writing team for this year's Academy Awards

Seth Grahame-Smith's life could be described as a mashup. He's author of the best-seller Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter, and the followup — The Last American Vampire — is now in stores.

Grahame-Smith is also busy with several other projects, including his directorial debut on the film Something Wicked This Way Comes, writing and co-producing the sequel to Beetlejuice, writing two Lego movies and writing a pilot for CBS.

He's also on the writing team for this year's Academy Awards. In a recent interview, Grahame-Smith said the Oscars have always been a big deal in the Grahame-Smith household" and that he usually throws viewing parties when the awards are presented. This year, he'll be "in a tux, backstage. That'll be fun."

In a recent interview, the 39-year-old talked about his new book, juggling projects and teaching through entertainment.

Should you get credit for creating the mash-up?

I don't think that Pride and Prejudice and Zombies or Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter created the mash-up, I just think they popularized it. I think there were mash-ups before, and I think, there were certainly people blending genres, and writers way better than me and far longer ago, who were playing with the idea of mixing fantasy and horror or mixing sciencefiction with romance. I think I just happen to do it in a very loud and obnoxious way and was lucky enough to do it a time when people were receptive to it.

You write about historical figures, vampires and zombies, but you do a lot of research for your books. There are facts in these stories.

I give you some medicine with your sugar. I give you a little bit of real history — just enough so you know something about that time period so you can discuss it at a dinner party; as long as you don't go further than that and add the part where vampires start cutting each other's heads off and everything.

How do you keep track of your projects?

A typical day now might be: I work on some Lego movie stuff, I work on some Beetlejuice stuff and then I jump over here and work on Oscars, and then I jump back and I work on who knows what else, but it's great! I love being busy. I love the challenge of it, I love the engagement of it ... At some point all of this goes away and, you know, you get bounced out of the writing business or bounced out of Hollywood one way or another. Almost everybody does. So, I'm just trying to enjoy it while it losts

Do you ever procrastinate when you're writing?

I procrastinate all day. In 12 hours of sitting at the computer desk every day, I probably do 2-1/2 hours of writing, if I'm being generous. Because there are other things going on. There are phone calls to be returned, there are meetings to be had, lunches to go to, there are emails to browse through and then ... who doesn't love Twitter or Facebook or Reddit or Gawker or Gizmoto or Huffington Post or any of the 2,000 sites I read religiously every day, all day? # Next entry in Stieg Larsson's crime series lands in August

A sequel to late Swedish author Stieg Larsson's best-selling Millennium crime trilogy will go on sale in at least 35 countries in August, the book's publishers said Tuesday.

That Which Does Not Kill was completed by David Lager-crantz, known for co-authoring Swedish soccer star Zlatan Ibrahimovic's autobiography. He stands in for Larsson, who died in 2004 at the age of 50.

Salander sequel

- At the time of his death Larsson reportedly had plans to write at least another seven novels.
- Larsson's publishers, Nordstedts, say the first three books in the Lisbeth Salander series have sold 80 million copies worldwide since the first book went on sale in 2005.
- The Aug. 27 release of the next book is being compared to the hype surrounding Dan Brown's Da Vinci Code in 2003.

The book will continue the story of troubled but resourceful heroine Lisbeth Salander, first made famous in The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo.

But the author remained tight-lipped about the meaning of the title or what direction the action-packed political thriller — 500 pages long in Swedish — will take.

"What I wanted to make use of in the book was the vast mythology that Stieg Larsson left behind, the world he created," Lagercrantz told the daily Dagens Nyheter, adding that he remained loyal to Larsson's writing style, which weaved criticism of social and political issues with criminal intrigue.

"Lisbeth Salander's not just any superhero. She's not only great because of her talents, but also because of her context and background." AFP

Style. Flamboyant or minimalist, hére are the coming season's undergarment trends

The organizers of the Parisian trade show Salon International de la Lingerie presented some of the leading underwear trends for Fall-Winter 2015-2016 this week.

The season offers something for everyone, with lingerie that is sophisticated, seductive, simple, or all of the above.

Last year, an overriding trend emerged from the lingerie collections in Paris: "erotic glam."

Designers presented their undergarments as tools of seduction that were sexy, or even kinky, yet always glamorous and refined.

From outerwear to lingerie, the styles of the '80s have influenced fashion for more than three decades now.

But lingerie designers are taking things to a new level this year with eccentric, often unconventional pieces inspired by the decade of big hair. For the most part, this means amplified volume and flashy colours.

Sexy, seductive and exuberant, the woman of the '80s has long been represented in lingerie by French

"In my version, the flavours are mild, keeping it very family friendly, but you can certainly boost the heat by adding a fresh sliced and seeded chilli pepper, as Nigella suggests in her original recipe.

"You can serve this as part of a casual Mexican-inspired buffet by adding baskets of crisp tortilla chips, sour cream, shredded cheese, fresh cilantro, pickled jalapeños, green onions and lime wedges, or just as it is alongside a floury dinner roll or hunk of cornbread."

and add the ground beef and sausage. Brown the meat on medium heat, breaking it up as it cooks.

2. Add the onion and garlic and cook until soft and translucent, about 8–10 minutes.

Stir in the cumin, coriander, cinnamon, cardamom and chili powder; mix well to combine.

3. Stir in the tomato paste, ketchup, beans and crushed tomatoes; add the stout and

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 2 lb (1 kg) lean ground beef
- 2 lb (1 kg) sausages, casings removed
- 3 medium onions, peeled and finely chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, peeled and finely chopped
- 2 tsp (10 ml) ground cumin
- 1 tsp (5 ml) ground coriander
- 1 tsp (5 ml) ground cinnamon
- 1/2 tsp (2.5 ml) ground cardamom
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chili powder one 5 1/2 oz (156 mL) can tomato paste
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) ketchup • three 14 oz (398 ml) cans red
- kidney beans, drained
- three 14 oz (398 ml) cans crushed or diced tomatoes
- one 16 oz (475 ml) can stout beer (such as Guinness)
  1/2 cup (125 ml) semi-sweet
- chocolate chips
   salt and pepper to taste

Check seasonings, adding salt and pepper if necessary.

AUTO PREVIEW

Mirage: Value you can see

The Mirage enters its second year in North America the same way as its first year, as one of the least expensive new cars for sale.

The four-door, five-passenger Mirage is manufactured in Thailand for Mitsubishi's European and Asian markets and is larger than the Chevrolet Spark in most key exterior measurements. However, it's smaller than the Ford Fiesta, Honda Fit and Hyundai Accent hatches.

The Mirage is perched low to the ground on tiny 14-inch wheels while the rounded and somewhat stubby front gives the car a cute-in-its-own-way appearance that belies its wind-cheating (i.e., numerically very low) drag coefficient.

Although the front doors and liftgate are generously sized, smallish rear doors and a sloping roofline hamper three-in-a-pinch rear-seat access. The interior appointments are simple, yet tasteful, with easy-to-read gauges and controls. The 60:40 split rear seat can be folded down for added stowage (although you won't get a perfectly flat load floor), but even when occupied there is reasonable space for groceries and gear.

Of course, contemplating a vehicle this small usually involves compromises and in the Mirage's case you give up room in return for exemplary fuel economy. The car's pumppassing nature comes from a 74-horsepower, 1.2-litre three-cylinder engine mated to your choice of a five-speed manual transmission or optional continuously variable unit (CVT). The latter features something called Idle Neutral Logic, which automatically shifts the transmission into neutral when stopped to save fuel, then switches back into drive mode when the go pedal is pushed.

Mitsubishi is touting 6.4 l/100 km in the city and 5.3 highway for the CVT, which is better than the Chevy Spark's 7.7/6.1 rating with a similar transmission. – Wheelbase Media

Mitsubishi Lancer. CONTRIBUTEI

Lancer's straightforward styling

With the Lancer entering its eighth model year, Mitsubishi continues to eschew the kind of frivolous updating that other automakers regularly bestow on their offerings. That seems fine with most buyers who appreciate the Lancer's straightforward interior/exterior styling and range of efficient powerplants.

The Lancer's trim levels — base DE, SE, SE Limited, SE AWC (All Wheel Control) and GT — carry over for 2015, as does the scared-rabbit-imitating Lancer Evolution.

Base models come with a 148-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder engine driving the front wheels through a five-speed manual transmission or an optional continuously variable unit. The SE and the tough-looking GT AWC models are upgraded to a 168-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder engine mated to continuously variable transmissions. — Wheelbase Media

THE RVR IS AN ATTRACTIVE PROPOSITION

In an ever-shrinking lineup, the RVR remains one of Mitsubishi's more popular (and darned attractive) models. That being the case, it's good to see the automaker provide continual updates to make it a more attractive proposition for new-car shoppers.

From the driver's perspective, the continuously variable transmission (CVT) comes with seven speeds, which should reduce the rubber-band sensation that plagues some of these units. The CVT is also credited with slightly improving the RVR's fuel economy.

In addition, the RVR's more efficient electric-power-steering unit plays its part in conserving fuel. Providing the thrust is a Lancer-based 2.0-litre, four-cylinder engine that generates 148 horsepower and 145 pound-feet of torque. A five-speed manual transmission is standard in the base ES and SE front-wheel-drive models, while the CVT is optional in the SE, but standard on all-wheel-drive SE and GT versions (the latter includes paddle shifters).

The RVR's all-wheel-drive is controlled through a floor console switch. Under normal driving conditions, the vehicle remains in front-wheel drive, but when tire slip is detected, up to 70 per cent of the torque can be directed to the back wheels. The AWD unit can also be set to the lock position that maintains a 60:40 torque split when the situation calls for maximum traction from all four wheels.

The base ES includes a nice assortment of standard features that will please most bargain hunters. Standard content progressively increases as you move through a number of trim and package levels before arriving at the GT AWC (All Wheel Control).

Along with all-wheel-drive, the GT gets a panoramic fixed-glass sunroof, climate control, keyless entry and ignition, rain-sensing windshield wipers, premium seat fabrics, 18-inch wheels (16-inchers are standard) and special interior and exterior trim. — Wheelbase Media

FUNKY STYLING, FRUGAL PRICE TAG

KIA SOUL IS A WINNER

Few cars are ever considered groundbreaking, but that pretty much sums up the Soul. It's the kind of vehicle that other automakers would give anything to have in their stable.

Funky styling, a frugal price tag and fuelsaving ways have made it a winner.

For 2015, Kia upgraded and slightly enlarged the cabin for more front head and shoulder room and added a bit more rear legroom. In addition, the dashboard was revised to accommodate an available 20-centimetre touch screen. The platform was made 29 per cent stiffer and accommodates a suspension that was re-engineered for improved ride and handling.

Outside, design details inspired by the Soul-based Trax'ster concept provided the basis for a front and rear facelift that makes the Soul much more appealing. The rear liftgate was made six centimetres wider and is now flanked by one of the coolest set of tail lights installed on any vehicle.

The entry-level LX Soul is equipped with a 1.6-litre, four-cylinder that produces 130 horsepower and 118 pound-feet of torque, while the optional 2.0-litre, four-cylinder in the EX and SX models delivers the same 164 horses and 151 pound-feet of torque.

Base Souls feature air conditioning, but not when the manual transmission is ordered, plus all the usual power amenities. Optional is a panorama-style sunroof and leather seats (heated and ventilated in front), along with a navigation system and premium Infinity-brand sound package.

to $30,000 — count an extra $200 for any colour other than black or white.

Under the heading of "big news," the Soul EV arrives for 2015 with an electric motor rated at 109 horsepower and 210 pound-feet of torque and an EPA-rated range of about 150 kilometres before its lithium-ion-polymer batteries need recharging. – Wheelbase Media

Kia Sedona. CONTRIBUTED

SEDONA IS RIGHT ON THE MONEY

The 2015 Kia Sedona style and proportions are right on the money, which is devoid of superfluous curves and angles. The interior is as clean and uncluttered as the exterior and it abounds in handy touches. There's room for up to eight people with the standard second-row bench seat, or seven with the optional second-row lounge chairs (with retractable leg rests) that can be positioned facing the front or the rear.

Mounted within the Sedona's stiffer platform is a 3.3-litre V6 with 276 horse-power and 248 pound-feet of torque. It's pretty decent on fuel with a rating of 12.9 I/100 km in the city and 9.5 on the highway.

Expect the seven trim levels to run a very broad range, from practical family transporter to full-on luxury machine to compete with the Chrysler Town & Countrys of the world. – Wheelbase Media

Care, attention are Rio highlights

Some automakers spit out sub-compact models as if being shot from a Pez dispenser. Kia takes a different approach in producing its well-appointed Rio sedan and Rio five-door hatchback editions with lots of care and attention, and it shows.

Hyundai and Kia, both part of a Koreabased conglomerate, are tasked with providing well turned-out entry-level cars that are fun to drive. A big part of that fun comes from their non-claustrophobic interiors that are enclosed in sheet metal that's stylish without being overly trendy.

For the Rio sedan and five-door models, that attention to detail extends to the dash-board layout that's clearly presented and, due to the absence of hard plastic surfaces, is far richer looking than you would expect. The air conditioning, rear-window heat and ventilation toggle switches are a particularly nice touch.

The standard 1.6-litre, four-cylinder engine produces 138 horsepower and 123 pound-feet of torque, which works out just fine in a light 1,130-kilogram vehicle. All Rios come with six-speed manual transmissions or optional six-speed automatics.

The base Rio LX sedan with the manual gearbox is somewhat light in the content department, while the mid-range LX+ includes air conditioning, plus a few more goodies.

The EX adds cruise control, six-speaker

Kia Rio. CONTRIBUTED

audio system, soft-touch dash and a smattering of leather trim, while the top-end (and sportier) SX adds "Steptronic" paddle shifters for the automatic transmission, 17-inch wheels (15-inchers are standard), leather interior, rain-sensing wipers and more. To add navigation, you need the SX. The five-door's trim levels match the sedan's, except there is no LX+.

To help save fuel dollars, the LX+ automatic-equipped car can be ordered with what Kia calls Idle Stop and Go (ISG). This feature shuts off the engine after the Rio comes to a complete stop, then instantly fires it up once the brake pedal is released.

The Power to Surprise

Chevrolet Cruze. CONTRIBUTED

A makeover for the Cruze

While Chevrolet has been winning hearts with the incredibly stylish Impala, its older products have been in need of a little more

So the Cruze gets a small facelift for 2015 with a more prominent set of intakes and a slightly revised grille. And like virtually every other vehicle on the market, LED running lights are standard on the higher trim levels.

Mechanically, things remain unchanged. The 2.0-litre turbo-diesel engine offers more horsepower and torque — 151 and 264, respectively — than either of the gasoline engines, and torque can reach 280 poundfeet for brief bursts of flat-out acceleration. While its zero-to-60 mph time in the mideight-second range will be enjoyed by some, everyone will appreciate the 700-plus-mile cruising range, thanks to a headline 5.1 l/100 km highway fuel-economy figure. The diesel only comes one way — with equipment equivalent to a 2LT trim in regular Cruzes. That means niceties like leather seats, heated front seats, a nicer instrument cluster with chrome trim, 17-inch wheels, rear spoiler and more.

Most Cruze trims include the MyLink radio (which streams music via Bluetooth), voice recognition and compatibility with Pandora Internet radio. A seven-inch colour touch screen stereo with navigation and USB port can be had in virtually every model, while driver convenience packages on most trims include a number of useful options such as power seats, auto-dimming rear view mirrors, rear-vision camera and more.

The Cruze's standard and optional power plants are diminutive, but more than adequate. The base car is equipped with a 1.8-litre, four-cylinder that produces 138 horsepower and 123 pound-feet of torque.

Move up to the LT and LTZ and you will get a smaller 1.4-litre turbocharged four-cylinder that's also rated at 138 horsepower but with 25 pound-feet more torque. The 1.8 offers a choice of a six-speed manual transmission, or optional six-speed automatic, while the 1.4 turbo is only available with the automatic.

All Cruze models include 10 airbags, while the standard stability control includes a rollover-sensing program that will deploy the airbags if it detects the car is about to tip over. - Wheelbase Media

COLORADO HAS PLENTY TO OFFER

General Motors gets its mid-size groove back after a two-model-year absence with extended and crew cabs available.

For hard-working, hard-playing people with moderate towing and hauling requirements, it doesn't get much better than the new Chevrolet Colorado and close facsimile GMC Canyon pickups.

Both return for 2015 (they were phased out after the 2012 model year) in bigger and more powerful forms, but remain smaller and less capable than the fullsize Chevy Silverado/GMC Sierra.

Still, for many pickup fans, they have plenty to offer, whether it's the four-door extended cab with a five-foot-two-inch (157-centimetre) box, or the four-door crew cab that comes with a four-foottwo-inch (127-centimetre) or available five-foot-two-inch (157-centimetre) bed. There is no regular cab model available.

Each cab style can be had with a 200-horsepower, 2.5-litre four-cylinder, or optional 305-horsepower V6. A sixspeed manual transmission is standard with the 2.5, while a six-speed automatic is optional, but standard with the V6.

Interestingly, the V6 comes very close to matching the four-cylinder in the I/100 km department (11.9 city and 8.8 highway for the four-cylinder versus 13.0/9.2 for rear-wheel-drive models). It's also the one to buy when hauling payloads up to 725 kilograms or towing up to 3,175 kilograms (double the 2.5's capacity).

Colorados can be had in base, WT (Work Truck), LT and Z71 4x4 trim levels. The latter is equipped with an offroad suspension package, locking rear differential, all-terrain rubber, automatic transmission and hill-descent control.

All Colorados come with a corner-step rear bumper (no need for an external stair to access the bed), a locking tailgate and two-tier loading that, by sliding braces and a platform that you supply, creates two separate cargo areas.

There are, of course, a plethora of options and packages for the Colorado, including leather seats (heated in front). eight-inch touch screen, navigation system, and a factory-installed spray-on hed liner.

In terms of safety, a forward collision alert and lane departure warning can be added (a rear-vision camera is standard). Wheelbase Media

GO BIG OR GO HOME

THE CHEVY TAHOE

While the world is downsizing with car-based platforms for their tall wagons as well as fewer cylinders, that's just not the Tahoe way.

The 2015 Tahoe has undergone a complete transformation, resulting in a sleeker, lighter shape, a more economical and powerful engine and added safety and content.

The trimmer sheet metal and the stylish grille create the impression that the Tahoe is a bit smaller than before, but the tape measure proves that not much has really changed.

The Tahoe's body is attached to a stronger ladder frame that slightly widens the distance between the left and right wheels for greater stability. Mounted between the rails is a 5.3-litre V8 that produces 355 horsepower and 383 pound-feet of torque. Although the displacement is the same as last season's base V8, this 5.3 is all-aluminum and features direct fuel injection (fuel is force-fed directly into the cylinders under high pressure) and continuously variable valve timing (alters valve-lift duration to improve performance).

In addition, a program reduces cylinder function to four from eight when not needed, which improves fuel economy. These features plus a lighter engine and improved aerodynamics help the Tahoe achieve 14.9 1/100 km in the city and 10.1 on the highway (slightly higher when the optional fourwheel-drive is added).

The only transmission is a six-speed automatic with steering-wheel "TapShift"

Chevrolet Tahoe. CONTRIBUTED

controls. The 2015 Tahoe comes in LS, LT and LTZ flavours. Base models offer plenty of standard gear with the mid- and top-grade trims piling on content such as keyless push-button entry, power-folding rear seat and magnetic ride control that constantly adjusts the dampers to suit road conditions and driving style. For crash protection, the Tahoe comes with an available front-seat centre air bag that provides protection. - Wheelbase Media

An order from the fun department

WRX power plant produces 268 horsepower

All-wheel-drive and plucky turbocharged engines give these hot Subaru sedans a big boost in the fun department.

Compact sedans appeal to a buyer's practical nature. However, with the Subaru WRX and the more potent WRX STI, the appeal includes lively power plants, four-season driving competency plus sporty suspension and steering components that manage the snakiest of paved and unpaved roadways.

Both 2015 WRX models shed their optional hatchback body styles. That's surprising since hot hatches are currently all the rage. A new 2.0-litre turbocharged four-cylinder in the WRX produces 268 horsepower and 258 pound-feet of torque, while the STI continues with a 2.5-litre, four-cylinder with 305 horsepower and 290 pound-feet of torque.

The engines are "flat" with two banks of two pistons firing at 180 degrees to each other. Durable and with a low centre of gravity, each horizontally opposed four-cylinder (H4) engine is connected to a six-speed manual transmission, while a continuously variable unit (CVT) with paddle shifters is newly optional for the WRX. This fact will no doubt surprise loyal fans, but the real surprise is how closely it mimics a traditional multi-speed automatic. The CVT has six built-in steps when the driver switches to either Intelligent or Sport mode by the steering-wheel-mounted switch, or eight ratios when the Sport Sharp mode is selected.

Larger-diameter front disc brakes also provide greater stopping power. The standard all-wheel-drive system has a 50:50 torque split in the manual transmission cars and a 45:55 front-rear split with the CVT. But when the going gets tough, up to 100 per cent of the power can be directed to either axle.

For hardcore types, the STI remains a serious near-race machine that's ideally suited for drivers with sporting intentions. For non-racing types, the tamer, but still potent WRX would likely make a better choice. Either way, your drive route will have you travelling on Subaru's wilder side.

Subaru Outback. CONTRIBUTED

UPDATING THE OUTBACK

During its 20-year history, Subaru's plucky wagon has remained true to its roots, while undergoing continuous improvement.

For the 2015 model year, the Legacy-sedanbased Outback receives a number of critical updates.

Visually, the car appears similar to the outgoing version, although a revised grille, lightweight aluminum hood, reshaped headlights and door-mounted mirrors are evident.

The upgrades continue inside, with a quieter cabin with a reshaped dashboard, larger front seats and a more cavernous floor console.

The Outback's suspension has been retuned and Subaru has added Active Torque Vectoring that applies slight brake pressure to the inside front wheel during a turn.

The base 2.5-litre, four-cylinder engine produces a bit more peak horsepower (175 versus 173) and maintains the same torque rating of 174 pound-feet. The optional

3.6-litre six-cylinder continues to generate 256 horsepower and 247 pound-feet torque. The four-cylinder can be ordered with six-speed manual transmission, while a continuously variable transmission (CVT) is optional, but standard with the six-cylinder models.

The standard all-wheel-drive system has also been tuned for improved slippery-road performance. A new driver-controlled X-Mode adjusts the transmission and engine output plus the AWD system to reduce wheelspin.

X-Mode also adds Hill Descent Control (keeps vehicle speed to a crawl), Incline Start Assist (briefly holds the vehicle when starting on hills) and a Hill Holder System that prevents the Outback from rolling backward when stopped until the accelerator is pressed. When combined with the Outback's 22-centimere ground clearance, X-Mode makes the Outback more fit for rugged off-road duty.

- Wheelbase Media

Legacy continues to grow

A new challenger in the mid-size sedan league keeps an all-wheel-drive ace up its sleeve.

The Subaru Legacy has grown both in stature and size to become one of the most spacious mid-size four-doors on the market. It also matches the sedan pack leaders in attractiveness.

There is plenty of new stuff inside the updated cabin, including a more modern dashboard and a more centrally located touch screen display for the rear view camera and infotainment/navigation systems.

The Legacy's power plants carry over from 2014, although the base 175-horsepower, 2.5-litre four-cylinder receives slight changes to make it a bit lighter, quieter and more fuel-efficient. It's rated at 9.0 l/100 km in the city and 6.5 on the highway. Those numbers are achieved with a continuously variable transmission (CVT).

The optional 3.6-litre, six-cylinder produces 256 horsepower and 247 pound-feet of torque. The four-cylinder can be ordered with six-speed manual transmission, while a CVT is optional, but standard with the six-cylinder models.

The all-wheel-drive system — standard on all Legacy models — has been augmented for 2015 with torque vectoring. The system applies light braking to the inside front wheel while turning, which helps the Legacy rotate, thus helping to enhance steering control.

The base Subaru 2.5i arrives with numerous usual convenience features, including a 10-way adjustable power driver's seat. The 2.5i Touring adds a power sunroof, dual-zone climate control, push-button start and 17-inch alloy wheels (16-inch steelies are standard).

Pop for the 2.5i or 3.6R Limited and you get perforated leather seats, power passenger seat, 576-watt Harmon/Kardon-brand audio system and 18-inch wheels.

Pats aren't aiming for perfection, just a title

NFL. New England insists it's way beyond disappointment of 2008 Super Bowl loss

The road to perfection reached a dead end in the Arizona desert. Now the New England Patriots are back where a Super Bowl championship — and an unbeaten record — barely eluded them seven years ago.

Not that they dwell on their return to the place where the best season in NFL history slipped from their grasp.

"It's not where we play, it's how we play," Tom Brady said Wednesday, "and I'm glad we're here with the opportunity to do something really special.'

A win Sunday night against the Seattle Seahawks would even the Patriots' record in Super Bowls at University of Phoenix Stadium at 1-1. New England is seeking a championship, not closure for its 17-14 loss to the New York Giants in 2008.

"I'm sure it will be a cool story if we win, saying we came back to the same place," kicker Stephen Gostkowski said, "but I don't think about that stuff. I'm just looking to make the first kick that they send me out for."

So when a receiver leaps for a pass at the opponent's 23-yard line, don't expect the Patriots to have flashbacks to David Tyree trapping the ball against his helmet at that spot

"You know why I'm here."

That 32-yard completion with just over a minute left, after Eli Manning kept the play alive by breaking free with defensive end Richard Seymour tugging at his jersey, set up the winning 13-yard touchdown pass to Plaxico Burress. It took Patriots players a long time to get over how close they came to a 19-0 record. Then coach Bill Belichick met with his assistants.

"One day Bill walks in," running backs coach Ivan Fears said. "He says, 'We got to move on guys, start smiling."

It's a cornerstone of Belichick's philosophy. Lamenting misfortunes leads to more of them, Fears said.

Fears, offensive co-or-dinator Josh McDaniels and defensive co-ordinator Matt Patricia remain from the staff at the 2008 Super Bowl. Brady, Gostkowski and defensive tackle Vince Wilfork are the only players from that game still on the Patriots.

Women's hockey. Huskies solve AUS's best

The Saint Mary's Huskies hosted the St. Francis Xavier X-Women in a low-scoring affair Wednesday night, which ended with a 2-1 win over the visiting team in overtime.

After a scoreless first period, Laura Polak opened the scoring for Saint Mary's on a power play late in the second period.

But Taylor Dale of St. Francis Xavier was able to answer back before the middle frame was done, evening the score with 34 seconds left on the clock before second intermission.

The third was another nogoal period, which sent the game into a closely matched overtime period. It was finally Kara Power of the X-Women to break the tie and seal the 2-1 win for St. Francis Xavier.

Both netminders were solid between the posts, with Shin Sojung making 40 saves for the X-Women and Justine McIntosh turning away 29 saves for Saint

St. Francis Xavier leads the standings with 40 points and a current 20-game winning streak, while Saint Mary's is in fourth place with 20 points and a 9-10-2 record on the season. KRISTEN LIPSCOMBE/METRO

NBA. Red-hot 3rd quarter helps Raps to another win

Greivis Vasquez and Jonas Valanciunas combined for 21 points in a torrid third quarter as the Toronto Raptors, enjoying a season-high night from the three-point line, defeated Sacramento 119-102 Wednesday to hand the Kings their seventh straight loss.

Tied 54-54 at the half, the Raptors outscored Sacramento 39-22 in the third when they converted eight of 10 three-pointers. Toronto tied its season high of 15 threepointers by the end of the third and finished with 17 from 34 attempts. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

↑ Aries

March 21 - April 20

You will say or do something controversial today and those who are not as open and honest as you won't like it. Too bad. Rock the boat a little.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Stand up for what you believe in and refuse to change your ways or your views simply to please those in authority. By all means pick a battle today.

∐ Gemini May 22 - June 21

Anyone who doubts you are a free-thinker won't doubt it much longer. In fact, what you profess to believe over the next 24 hours will mark you

9 Cancer

June 22 - July 23

out as a maverick

You need to get tough today, firstly with yourself for being far too wasteful of late, then with those who seem to believe that you exist only to make life easier for them.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23

You will either draw closer to someone today or you will drift so far apart that you are unlikely ever to get back together again.

W Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Try not to make a big issue of something that is really quite trivial. If you are having problems on the work front take it as a sign that you are doing something wrong.

△ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Because the sun is moving through the most creative and dynamic area of your chart, you won't find it hard to start something special.

III Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It does not matter how many mistakes you have made or how many times you have failed. It matters only that you are still alive and kicking and ready to rejoin the fray.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You are at your best when dealing with people on a one-to-one basis, so forget about your chores and get out into the world and have fun.

り Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

The most important thing today, tomorrow and over the weekend is that you resist the urge to compare yourself to others. Set targets based on your own true desires.

⋄ Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The world is full of possibilities and each one of those is there for you to make use of. Others may say certain things cannot be done, but you must ignore them.

H Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Put the past behind you and start again with a more positive attitude. Get over any guilty feelings you have about things you should have done.
